

Mental Health at Work What Can I Do?

Mental Health at Work: What Can I Do? PSA Outreach Toolkit

Background:

The U.S. Department of Labor’s Campaign for Disability Employment (CDE) recently launched its fifth television public service announcement (PSA), “Mental Health at Work: What Can I Do?”—along with accompanying mental health materials and resources for use in the workplace.

“Mental Health at Work: What Can I Do?” features the faces and voices of four individuals—a CEO, manager, co-worker and person who identifies as having a mental health condition—each sharing what they can do to promote workplace wellbeing, from setting the tone for an inclusive workplace, to providing and requesting accommodations, to being a source of support to peers and colleagues. The overarching message is that we all play a role in promoting mental health-friendly workplaces.

We hope you will help us amplify the launch and promote the message of this important PSA through your channels. To help, this document includes ideas for promoting the PSA, as well as sample language and graphics for you to customize and distribute.

Thank you in advance for your support! If you have questions about materials or promotion of the PSA, email us at info@whatcanyoudocampaign.org.

Campaign for Disability Employment Launches Workplace Mental Health PSA

National Campaign Explores the Roles We All Play in Promoting Workplace Wellbeing

The Campaign for Disability Employment has launched its latest public education campaign. Built around a public service announcement (PSA) called “Mental Health at Work: What Can I Do?”, the campaign explores the roles we all can play in promoting a mental-health friendly workplace culture.

The PSA’s four cast members include a real CEO, manager, co-worker and person who identifies as having a mental health condition. All of them discuss what they can do to promote workplace wellbeing, from setting the tone for an inclusive workplace; to providing and requesting assistance and accommodations; to being a source of support to peers and colleagues. Their experiences remind us that we all benefit from flexible, supportive workplaces that promote good mental health.

Funded by the U.S. Department of Labor’s Office of Disability Employment Policy, the CDE is a collaborative of several disability and business organizations that showcases supportive, inclusive workplaces for all workers. “Mental Health at Work: What Can I Do?” is the campaign’s fifth in a series of PSAs, each of which has a suite of accompanying materials, such as posters, behind-the-scenes videos and companion guides. The CDE also offers badges that organizations can display on their own websites and blogs to show support for the campaign.
